Prior to joining Pisanelli Bice in October of 2011, Ms. Braster worked as a commercial litigator at one of the largest law firms in Las Vegas, Lionel Sawyer & Collins.

Ms. Braster argues a wide range of motions in state and federal court and has both first-chair and second-chair trial experience. She represents clients in a variety of business conflicts and in both property and construction disputes.

While attending law school at Temple University, Ms. Braster served as managing editor of the Temple International and Comparative Law Journal. She interned with Temple University's Legal Aid Office, representing clients in custody and child support matters. She also served as a law clerk for the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, Office of Regional Counsel in Philadelphia. Ms. Braster earned undergraduate degrees from Boston University in psychology and sociology, graduating cum laude.
